

VEHICLE SUSPENSION WITH IMPROVED RADIUS ARM TO AXLE ATTACHMENT

Abstract

A vehicle suspension system having radius arms that are connected to axle brackets through vertically arranged bushings. A third link of the suspension system is a track bar that connects one end of the axle to a laterally spaced point on the frame of the vehicle. The radius arms are sheet metal fabricated members that are assembled in a clam shell arrangement.